Otherwise, there is no direct way to go there except by private car.)
- Venice-Marco Polo Airport: To get to this airport you should take the train (see the Trenitalia website http://www.ferroviedellostato.it/homepage_en.html) to Venezia Mestre station and then take the ATVO bus to Marco Polo Airport. In total it takes around two and a half hours.
- Venice-Treviso Airport: To reach this this airport you have to take a train to Treviso. The train journey lasts more or less 2 hours. When you reach Treviso, you should get a bus from the main bus terminal which is just near the Central Train Station of Treviso. In total it takes around two and half hours to get to the airport. There is another way: one can take a bus from Venice Mestre station. Check ATVO for more information. This takes more or less the same amount of time.

By Train

Trieste is well connected with other Italian cities (Milan, Rome, Venice, etc) and also with European cities (i.e. Budapest). The railway station is in the city centre. Opposite the railway station you can easily take a bus. Bus tickets can be purchased inside the railway station at the tobacconist's shops.
