HUMANE 20th Anniversary Conference
Collège de France, Paris
Friday 9th to Saturday 10th June 2017

Redefining university leadership in a volatile world

AGENDA

Consistent with the global higher education challenges themes of recent annual conferences, the Paris Anniversary Conference will focus on the topical and important issue of the practice of leadership in an environment of ever-increasing volatility.

Our central premise is that environmental volatility is challenging the way we think about and practice leadership in our universities.

Universities' response to genuine crisis provides a fascinating way of analysing these challenges. Crises, as an extreme form of environmental volatility, shine an ultra-violet light on leadership culture and practice. We can learn a great deal from how leadership responds under these pressures. Most crises cannot be predicted; but the institutional response can be controlled. Well led responses to crises in universities can have a lasting and positive impact on institutional culture and reputation. A poor response can saddle an institution with problems for years to come.

We have assembled a diverse array of speakers from higher education, the public health sector, the world of insurance, intelligence and security, the media and politics to lead conference sessions over Friday afternoon and Saturday morning.

The conference will be hosted by Collège de France in collaboration with the recently established university and research community Paris Science et Lettres PSL.
